Boxing pro's next fight is helping troubled kids

Counterpunch.

A new boxing program in high-crime areas is aimed at youth seeking a way out.

A handful of boxing gyms in New York City are about to get help from a program called Luta de la Paz: "Struggle for Peace," explains founder Luke Dowdney.

These four gyms, located in neighborhoods prone to violence and crime, are already havens for youth seeking alternatives to such activities.

Luta is working with the gyms to implement a "life-changing program," instituting after-school activities, tutoring and mentoring. Frank Galarza, the pointman for the Luta program at Starrett City Boxing Gym in Brooklyn, was even more determined to get the program going after the recent death of a 14-year-old in the Bronx, Shaaliver Douse. Douse was firing at a group of men when he was fatally shot by cops.

"We want to reach out and figure out what can we do to help them grow, and do what we can on our part," Galarza said.

Galarza is an ideal mentor for kids who may be slipping into drugs, violence and crime: He was once one of those kids. His father "was involved in

An uppercut to crime

The Luta program will take place at four gyms in the Bronx, Brooklyn, Queens and New Rochelle, N.Y.

- The program offers boxing and mentoring to kids in neighborhoods with a high crime rate.

- Frank Galarza, a professional boxer, heads Luta at Starrett City Boxing.

- He said he's even more determined to make the project succeed after the recent shooting death of Shaaliver Douse, 14.

"Boxing helped me release frustration, helped me control my anger, helped in many areas of my life."

the wrong things," he said, and died when Galarza was 7 years old of complications from a gunshot wound. His mother died two years later from a drug overdose.

In a way, Frank was luckier than most: He had a loving aunt and uncle who took him in and raised him as their own. But that didn't stop him from ending up "in the streets," he said: "I became a troubled kid; I became someone who was very angry. As I got older it didn't get better, it just got worse."

Boxing changed all of that, he said, and he's hoping he can pass that experience on to young men all over Brooklyn.

After his last stint in jail and the death of his older brother in a robbery, Galarza decided to turn his life around. He won his first amateur match at the Golden Gloves and went pro immediately after. He is undefeated.

Luta picked the gyms it's partnering with — in the Bronx, Brooklyn, Queens and New Rochelle — because they are already doing the outreach work Luta advocates.

"We went out and selected these four as the best we came across that already have this mentality," Dowdney said. "Already they're saving lives just by being there."

Not nerve gas. JFK customs agents sick after opening package

Two customs agents became sick after opening a package at a JFK Airport postal facility yesterday.

While field tests initially showed nerve gas in the package, an FDNY spokesman said the workers were exposed to organic phosphate about 9:30 a.m. They were taken to Franklin

General Hospital in Long Island.

The FBI was called in to investigate the package and Port Authority police initially shut down the facility, according to several news reports.

The exposed workers are in stable condition, the FDNY said.

Protestors rally against 7-Eleven in East Village

Big Gulp. Some residents worry that a new 7-Eleven will change their neighborhood.

Hoping to ignite city opposition with another protest, a grassroots campaign once again rallied against a forthcoming 7-Eleven in the East Village Sunday.

Shouting "7-Eleven sucks — built on corporate mega bucks," protestors argued that a branch of the convenience store on 11th St. and Ave. A, which will open in a couple of months, serves no purpose in the community.

"It's a historical place with a special spirit that we want to preserve," said Ingrid Kelleman, 44, one of the group's organizers.

Protestors worry that 7-Eleven, which last year announced plans to open over 100 more locations in Manhattan, will destroy small businesses throughout the borough.

"If we keep having these chains in, all the beauty of local community is going to be undermined," said Sarah Timmons, 23.

Corporate takeover

"Here's someone that's gonna be able to take advantage over not only the corporate buying power but the rules of the government that favors corporations over individuals."

Quinn wants to raise the school drop-out age

Adult decision.

Her plan would make the legal drop-out age 18.

As part of a plan to increase high school graduation rates, City Council Speaker and mayoral candidate Christine Quinn proposed raising the high school drop-out age to 18.

"By raising the minimum age at which a student can drop out to 18, we will ensure only legal adults are making these important life decisions," Quinn said.

The city would need

Christine Quinn / GETTY IMAGES

permission from the state to change its drop-out age from 17.

Quinn said the move would send a message to students that the city expects them to stay in school. Some 9,000 students dropped out of city high schools last year, she said. The average income for dropouts is $8,000 less than high school graduates.

"Anything less than 100 percent graduation rate is unacceptable, and we as a city strive to change this and take measures to correct it," Quinn said.

The state's Department of Education did not immediately respond to request for comment on Quinn's proposal.

Do Not Postpone Treatment

Varicose veins can start out as a seemingly small problem, but left untreated, can become much more serious. Complications of varicose veins may include ulcers. These may form on the skin near the affected veins, particularly near the ankles.

They are caused by fluid build-up in the dysfunctional veins and can be extremely painful.

Dysfunctional veins can also increase the risk of blood clots. Patients may experience a swelling in the leg, which may indicate a blood clot. Left untreated, these clots can travel through the bloodstream and lodge near the heart or lungs, causing potentially life-threatening health problems.

Father, lawyer of Snowden set to make Russia visit

Fugitive. The inability to persuade Russia to return Snowden to the U.S. has curdled relations.

The father of Edward Snowden, the fugitive former federal spy agency contractor, has received a Russian visa and will travel there to see his son "very soon," the family's lawyer said yesterday.

Attorney Bruce Fein said in a television appearance that he and Lon Snowden were skeptical about President Barack Obama's pledge to limit government surveillance programs, and they remain doubtful that young Snowden can receive a fair trial in the United States.

"We have visas. We have a date, which we won't disclose right now because of the frenzy" over the affair, Fein told the ABC news program "This Week," on which they both appeared. They will travel to Russia "very soon," he said.

"We intend to visit with Edward and suggest criminal defense attorneys who have got experience in Espionage Act prosecutions," Fein said.

Lon Snowden told Reuters in an interview last week that he has not spoken to his son since the former National Security Agency contractor left the United States for Hong Kong, just before news broke in June of the disclosures he made about the covert surveillance programs. REUTERS

US condemns Iraq bombing wave as new violence kills seven more

Killings. Violence has raised fears that Iraq could relapse into the sectarian bloodbath of 2006-2007.

Gun attacks and a bombing killed at least seven more people in Iraq yesterday, police said, after a day of carnage aimed mainly at Shi'ite Muslims celebrating the end of Ramadan.

The United States condemned a wave of car bombings, which police and medical sources said killed nearly 80 people across Iraq on Saturday, saying those who had attacked civilians during Eid al-Fitr festivities were "enemies of Islam."

Bombs tore through markets, shopping streets and parks late on Saturday as Iraqi families were out celebrating the end of the Muslim fasting month.

Iraq's Interior Ministry said media reports about the attacks had been exaggerated in a way that would give a morale boost to attackers. It said 21 people had been killed across Iraq in the multiple attacks and that a recent security crackdown called "Avenge the Martyrs" had been effective.

Eighteen months since the last U.S. troops withdrew, Sunni Islamist militants have been gathering force in their insurgency against Iraq's Shi'ite-led government.

The civil war in neighboring Syria has aggravated tensions and the Interior Ministry said last month it was facing an "open war."

Reward

$10M

The State Department said Saturday's attacks bore the hallmarks of al Qaeda's Iraqi branch. It reiterated that it was offering a $10 million reward for information leading to the killing or capture of Abu Bakr al-Baghdadi, the AQI leader.

"The United States condemns in the strongest possible terms the cowardly attacks today in Baghdad," the State Department said. "The terrorists who committed these acts are enemies of Islam and a shared enemy of the United States, Iraq and the international community."

It said the United States would work closely with the Iraqi government to confront al Qaeda and discuss this during a visit of Foreign Minister Hoshiyar Zebari next week to Washington. REUTERS

Combat deaths

Three soldiers killed in eastern Afghanistan

Three U.S. soldiers were killed in Afghanistan's eastern borderlands yesterday, U.S. and NATO officials said, marking the first NATO combat deaths this month.

The soldiers, from the NATO-led International Security Assistance Force, were killed by insurgents in Paktia province, a U.S. official told Reuters. Paktia is one of several provinces that border Pakistan and have endured some of the highest levels of fighting during the U.S.-led 12-year war in Afghanistan.

U.S. soldiers based in Paktia are rarely involved in combat operations after handing over security responsibility to Afghan security forces earlier this year. They now primarily train their Afghan colleagues. REUTERS

Murder trial. Gay couple seeks spousal privilege protection

A legal debate over whether one member of a same-sex couple has spousal privilege that would shield her from testifying against her partner is at the heart of a capital murder case in politically conservative Kentucky.

Geneva Case, 49, does not want to testify in a Louisville court against her partner, Bobbie Jo Clary, 37, who is accused of beating George Murphy, 64, to death with a hammer in 2011 and then stealing his van.

Prosecutors say Case must testify because of her value as a witness, since she heard Clary admit to the slaying and also saw blood on the interior of the victim's van after the killing.

Clary says Murphy used a hammer to sexually assault her, and she defended herself by hitting him over the head.

Clary is also charged

Under Kentucky law, a person cannot be called to testify against his or her spouse. Most states have a similar type of law.

with tampering with evidence to cover up a crime. If convicted, Clary could face the death penalty.

But Kentucky is not among the 13 states that have legalized gay marriage.

Susan Sommer, an attorney for Lambda Legal, a national legal organization for the protection of gay rights, said she was not familiar with the details of the Kentucky case, but Lambda believes gay couples should have the same legal protections as other married people.

After five-and-a-half years working in electronics for the U.S. Navy, Nick Kneuper went to a music festival and saw a piece of technology that caught his eye. And lo and behold, Electric Styles — an apparel brand that brightens your wares with electroluminescent wiring — was born. Metro chatted with the ex-military man about his LED push-up bra, a $60 to $70 brassiere powered by two AA batteries.

Why light up a bra?

Well, my girlfriend wore one to a club and the girls there went crazy over it.

Do you have any celebrity fans?

One of the top 20 most recognizable actresses in America is going to wear one of our bras in a 2014 feature film. But our clothes have been everywhere. Brazilian actor Rodrigo Santoro was wearing a light-up hoodie on MTV.

Which celebrity would you love to wear your bras?

All of them! But especially Megan Fox. I think she would love them.

Do you think one day people will wear light-up bras to the shops?

I think so. Culture is moving in the direction where light-up clothing is going to be everyday.

Egypt expected to act against pro-Morsi protest camps today

Fortresses. Morsi's supporters have set up their camps with sandbags and piles of big rocks.

Egyptian police are expected to start taking action early today against supporters of ousted president Mohamed Morsi who are gathered in crowded protest camps in Cairo, security and government sources said, a move which could trigger more bloodshed.

The sites are the main flash points in the confrontation between the army, which toppled Morsi last month, and supporters who demand his reinstatement.

Western and Arab mediators and some senior Egyptian government officials have been trying to persuade the army to avoid using force against the protesters, who at times can number as much as tens of thousands.

"State security troops will be deployed around the sit-ins by dawn as a start of procedures that will eventually lead to a dispersal," a senior security source said yesterday, adding that the first step will be to surround the camps.

Army chief General Abdel Fattah al-Sisi, who toppled Morsi, has come under pressure from hard-line military officers to move against the protesters, security sources say.

Any further bloodshed would almost certainly deepen Egypt's political crisis and keep the government from dealing with vital issues such as the fragile economy.

Another security source said the decision to make a move today, just after celebrations following the holy month of Ramadan, came after a meeting between the interior minister and his aides. REUTERS

Almost 300 people have been killed in political violence since the overthrow, including dozens of Morsi supporters shot dead by security forces in two incidents.

Israel to free first group of prisoners for peace talks

An Israeli cabinet panel decided to free 26 Palestinian prisoners over the next few days under a deal that led to a resumption of U.S.-brokered peace talks after a three-year hiatus.

The prisoners would be the first of four groups totaling 104 that Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's cabinet last month agreed to release. REUTERS

Defiant. Israel expands West Bank settlements despite peace talks

Israel moved forward yesterday with plans to build nearly 1,200 homes for Jewish settlers, holding fast to a defiant settlement policy as cabinet ministers approved a deal to release Palestinian prisoners ahead of a new round of peace talks.

Israel has made a push on settlements since the resumption on July 30 of U.S.-brokered talks on Palestinian statehood, signaling its intention to continue to build in major enclaves it wants to keep in any future peace deal.

While condemning settlement expansion, Palestinians have stopped short of threatening outright to abandon the negotiations, which are due to go into a second round in Jerusalem on Wednesday after a session in Washington. REUTERS

Same school, different experience

Class. College isn't the same for all races, a study finds.

When Russell Lowery-Hart was a professor at West Texas A&M University, his adopted son was attending the same institution. At least as far as appearances go, the father-son relationship was somewhat unusual in West Texas: Lowery-Hart is white, and his son is black.

"He would talk about his experiences, and they were just so different from what I thought they would be," says Hart, who now works at Amarillo College. "I wanted to explore and understand what it meant to be an African-American student at colleges similar to the one we were at."

Soon, Hart launched a qualitative study to do just that. His team of researchers focused on three major U.S. college campuses —

- 2010: 14 percent of total student body

two public, one private. In total, 87 African-American students participated over a five-year span, taking part in lengthy interviews and discussions.

Hart quickly discovered many common themes developing in the experiences the students related to him.

The study found that students were regularly frustrated when professors put them on the spot during discussions related to black culture. They often felt they were expected to speak for the entire black experience.

Secondly, during freshman orientation, students reported being pulled from the larger group to receive a more specific African-American orientation. Almost all the students felt this approach highlighted their difference in a negative way.

Lastly, the study found that students struggled profoundly with adapting to their predominantly white campuses. They reported often experiencing severe pushback from their families over this issue. The completed study is making waves, Hart says.

"A lot of the literature around this topic frames this from an either-or mentality, as if students either want to be included or they want to be separate. But it's far more complicated than that," explains Lowery-Hart. "What we've discovered is that students want both. They want to honor their past and embrace their future."

Clean the dorm disaster area

Petri dish. Keep your room germ-free and stay healthy.

The general chaos and messy mayhem of a college dorm is the stuff of legend. With so many people living away from the people who told them to pick up after themselves, the laundry piles up, counters are sticky with beer and getting sick is a part of life.

Robin Wilson has been head of her eco-friendly design firm, Robin Wilson Home, since 2000. Here she names the products for students getting ready to move into their cinder block palaces this fall.

Mattress pad

It's no "princess and the pea" fussiness that makes a mattress pad vital to college students, Wilson says. "Who knows how many people have slept on that mattress before you. And more importantly, we spend one third of our lives sleeping — shouldn't your face be near something that you can keep clean?"

A water bottle

Students who want to help their health (and their budget) should invest in a water bottle. Her favorite brand is Klean Kanteen water bottles, because they don't leak and can be used for hot or cold liquids. "Students aren't going to have a huge budget to buy bottled water, and they can refill at water fountains around campus," she says.

Cutting down on germs means you might get to skip the next floor-wide outbreak of the flu. / ZONAR RE

Toothbrush sanitizer

A lot of people use the bathroom in the dorms. It's important, Wilson says, to keep your toothbrush safe from microbes and gross bacteria. Wilson recommends a charcoal-filtered toothbrush sanitizer. It snaps over the bristles and keeps things clean — she's tried it herself. "I used it last winter and didn't get a single cold," she says, adding that the sanitizer protects bristles from mishaps on the way to the bathroom. If the toothbrush is dropped, only the clip-on sanitizer touches the ground.

Common Core. Study shows schools struggle to keep up

Common Core testing might not help struggling schools. / PHOTODISC

States that have adopted a stricter, standardized schools curriculum are having difficulty finding the resources to support the more rigorous requirements, a study released last week shows.

Of the 40 states that adopted the Common Core State Standards, 34 reported trouble finding adequate funding to support the stringent activities the curriculum entails, said the survey by the Center for Education Policy at George Washington University.

"Finding adequate resources is the main challenge looming over states' efforts to prepare districts, schools, principals and teachers for the Common Core," said Diane Stark Rentner, deputy director of national programs for CEP and author of the study.

Nearly all the states that adopted Common Core, an initiative that is designed to lead to national standardized English and math tests for kindergarten through 12th grade, are complying with the curriculum, the study found. REUTERS

CULTURE

Twitter feed

We check in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Today, Bob Saget is feeling feisty, Bill Maher is getting out of town and Lena Dunham didn't realize how thin her boyfriend is.

@bobsaget: I don't like to drink alone 'cause there's nobody to fight with.

@billmaher: I'm leaving for a real vaca. To an island. If u dont hear from me in a week im off the grid! 2 wks call for help, Putin's got me!

@lenadunham: Grabbed boyfriend's shorts for a slouchy cool dog-walking look and couldn't fit them over my butt

Keeping up with the Kardashians

Just in case you needed to know what is up with American's favorite Armenian family, it looks like Kourtney Kardashian has some 'splainin' to do.

On Thursday, Michael Girgenti, a professional model, filed a paternity suit in Los Angeles County Superior Court saying that he had a one-night stand with Kardashian. That wouldn't be so noteworthy, except he is saying her son Mason is actually his and not Scott Disick's.

Kardashian's lawyer, Shawn Holley, said in a statement that Girgenti's accusations are "false and defamatory."

Meanwhile, sis Kim is still refusing to sell pictures of baby North West. TMZ is reporting that the

KOURTNEY KARDASHIAN

she and baby daddy Kanye West have been offered upward of $3 million for pictures of the tot, but they have declined all offers. Per the website, Kim and Kanye are either going to release them to an upscale publication (Vanity Fair is one name being thrown around) or they are going to put them up on social media, a la Blue Ivy.

Kevin Federline is married again

Kevin Federline, the pop culture punching bag of the aughts, was married in a surprise ceremony to longtime girlfriend Victoria Prince on Saturday in Las Vegas.

The ceremony, which sounded like the definition of high-brow, occurred at the Hard Rock Hotel in Las Vegas with their 1-year-old daughter Jordan Kay in attendance. Federline's four (four!) other children were reportedly not there.

Beyoncé cut her hair. It is huge, huge news. / INSTAGRAM

ICYMI: Beyoncé's new hair

In what became headline news over the weekend, Beyoncé Knowles shockingly cut her hair and posted photos of it on Instagram. I know — it's surprising the world didn't fall off its axis. Within hours, it was the cut-heard-round-the-world with A-listers gabbing about the pixie-do on Twitter. Ellen DeGeneres joked, "If you had trouble telling me and @Beyonce apart before..." Emma Watson, who has done the short look herself, wrote: "Nearly got out my scissors this morning after seeing @Beyonce's pixie cut. I only just managed to restrain myself. Close call though."

Chris Brown suffers seizure

What was the cause behind Chris Brown's seizure on Friday? The short answer is, "Us!"

The embattled singer was felled by a seizure on Friday in a L.A. recording studio. It was so bad, 911 was summoned — but Brown refused treatment by the time the EMTs arrived on the scene. On Saturday, Chris's rep said the seizure was triggered by "intense fatigue and extreme emotional stress, both due to the continued onslaught of unfounded legal matters and the nonstop negativity."

I mean, I get it. Guy did his "time" with the Rihanna incident — it's time to move on. But when you beat your girlfriend so badly she almost dies and then kick her out onto the street, are we supposed to forgive and forget? That's a tall order.

Talking points

Oprah Winfrey's 'Pretty Woman' moment

Even Oprah Winfrey isn't safe from discrimination, as she learned while shopping for a handbag in Zurich recently. Winfrey tells Entertainment Tonight that when she asked a clerk at the chic Trois Pommies boutique to see a $35,000 Tom Ford bag, the clerk refused. "She says to me, 'No. It's too expensive,'" Winfrey remembers. "That one will cost too much and you will not be able to afford that." Winfrey decided not to make a scene. "I could have had the big blowup thing and thrown down the [American Express] black card and all that stuff, but why do that?" she says. A spokeswoman for the boutique calls the episode "an absolute misunderstanding," saying the problem was the clerk did not recognize Winfrey. Which begs the question — who doesn't recognize Oprah Winfrey?

Vaughn welcomes son

Vince Vaughn is a dad once again. The star and his wife, Kyla Weber, welcomed their second child, a boy, last week, according to Us Weekly. Vernon Lindsay Vaughn joins 2-year-old big sister Locklyn Kyla Vaughn. Vernon arrived weighing in at 8 pounds, 4 ounces.

Who ya gonna call? Saul Goodman

TV. Bob Odenkirk is ready for a "Breaking Bad" spin-off.

Fans of "Breaking Bad" know that killing off major characters is nothing new to the series. And anyone who thought Bob Odenkirk's character, the sleazy lawyer Saul Goodman, would get axed before the final eight episodes is in good company.

"I kept waiting for them to fit me for a severed head," Odenkirk tells us. "But they never did — they just didn't want to spend money on that much wax for the size head that I have," he jokes.

Odenkirk has made it to at least this point in the series, and there's talk about a possible spin-off for his character. But we'll let the man himself tell you more about that, as well as how much he knows about the crooked counsel's final "Breaking Bad" moments.

Everyone has high expectations about this last season. How do you feel leading up to it?

I'm gonna feel just like a fan feels, just like you or anyone who loves the show. I have not read the final episode ... I stuffed it through my trash so I wouldn't be tempted. So if Saul's story doesn't end, what's all this talk of a spin-off?

You're on to something. [Laughs] For some reason people feel great affection toward Saul. They want him to carry on. Vince Gilligan should answer that question, or Peter Gould maybe — one of the writers who wrote the first episode Saul appeared on.

visuals, all the moments — it's still always a surprise when I watch it. ... I know I'm gonna be going crazy every week, waiting for the next one.

Do you know how Saul's story ends?

Well, I like to think it doesn't end, but ... I would say I pretty much know how Saul's story ends. I don't know ultimately how Walter White's story ends. That's what I avoided, and even though I know everything that leads up to it, I just don't know the choices he makes in the final episode.

Classist film shares the cash

Box office. Matt Damon (narrowly) beats drug dealers, talking planes and sea monsters.

Matt Damon's futuristic thriller "Elysium," the story of an elite space outpost locked in battle with poor invaders from a ruined Earth, won a crowded box-office race among four new films at U.S. and Canadian theaters over the weekend.

"Elysium" grabbed $30.5 million in domestic ticket sales from Friday through Sunday, according to estimates from distributor Sony Pictures. The movie added $10.9 million from 17 international markets, for a combined global opening of $41.4 million.

"Elysium" edged the Jennifer Aniston comedy "We're the Millers," which took in $26.6 million, while "Planes," a spin-off of Walt Disney Co.'s Pixar

Top 5 earners

- 1 'Elysium' $30.5 million
- 2 'We're the Millers' $26.6 million
- 3 'Planes' $22.5 million
- 4 'Percy Jackson: Sea of Monsters' $14.6 million
- 5 '2 Guns' $11.1 million

franchise "Cars," took off with $22.5 million at domestic theaters, finishing in third.

The other newcomer, fantasy movie "Percy Jackson: Sea of Monsters," landed fourth with $14.6 million.

Effects-filled action movie "Elysium" came in at the low end of pre-weekend forecasts for a debut in the low $30 million range. The movie portrays two distinct worlds in the year 2154: a diseased and overpopulated Earth and Elysium, a space station where the elite live far from the seething masses.

"Planes," which features the voice of Dane Cook as Dusty, a crop duster trying to overcome a fear of heights, was produced by the DisneyToon studio for $50 million and originally planned as a direct-to-DVD release.

Finishing fifth for the weekend, action movie "2 Guns," starring Denzel Washington and Mark Wahlberg, took in $11.1 million. REUTERS

GABRIELLE BERNSTEIN

WWW.GABBYB.TV

Gabrielle Bernstein is the author of "Spirit Junkie."

Often, spiritually guided, inspired moments in our lives end up being just ... moments. In other words, despite your excellent intentions, you cleanse and then go right back to eating office cupcakes. You work out for a month and then stop moving at all. You plan to cut off a toxic relationship and then, in a moment of weakness, text that person you know is bad for you. Why?

The truth is that living a healthy, miraculous life requires real commitment and practice. Without it, even your most soul-directed intentions may falter.

The right tools make these moments more of a mind-set. Try these tips and practices that I created and use all the time.

Practice radical forgiveness

When we slip up, we often enter a cycle of guilt that

If you're trying to make changes, think of the big-picture results of your actions. / BRAND X sabotages our progress even more. What if you could learn to forgive yourself on the spot? Forgiveness is a choice you make. Next time you judge yourself for falling off the wagon, simply say, "I choose to forgive myself now." Then relax into that commitment. You can also try to catch yourself in the act of self-attack. In those moments, redirect your energy by focusing something you do like about yourself.

When in doubt, play it out

It's easy to forget about the long-term consequences of small choices, especially when temptation (say, a jumbo frosted cupcake) is right in front of you. But playing out the entire story from start to finish can help you see the bigger picture. For example: After you eat the cupcake, a sugar headache sets in and you've added some unwanted calories to your day. Doesn't sound so fun after all, right? If you take the time to play out the entire scenario, you can talk yourself out of making a mistake. Use this tool whenever you find yourself enchanted by something that ultimately is not good for you.

Work on willpower

When it comes to self-discipline, the words "don't" and "can't" come up a lot. Though the words can be used interchangeably, they hold much different power. A recent study done by researchers at Boston College and the University of Houston shows that replacing the word "can't" with "don't" can help you change negative patterns. The reason? "I don't do that," it is an empowering sentence, versus, "I can't do that," which isn't.

PLUS

Sweat it out

Free workouts!

Don't let the heat stop you from meeting your fitness goals: New York Sports Club is opening its facilities to nonmembers any day between now and Aug. 31 that the temps rise above 90 degrees. "When the temperature reaches over 90 degrees, it is not safe for people to work up a sweat outside," company VP Chris Ruta says.

Remember that trains don't wait

If you don't have a firm routine in the morning, you can find yourself struggling to pull yourself together and get out the door. This pattern of behavior can not only make you miss your train, it's also a great way to forget important things at home.

So, remember: Trains do not wait. Period. Missing your train only adds more time to your commute, so plan accordingly!

Hint: Creating a morning routine will save time and result in a less-panicked you.

How to hack your commute and relax

The commute to and from work can seem like the longest part of your day, especially if you're tired on the way in and more tired on the way out. It's easy to squander this time staring off into space, but you'll feel better in the long run if you spend your commute productively. MEGHAN GRAVES

Get caught up

Living in a world built around technology makes it easy to get things done without sitting at a desk. Starting projects, reading the news, paying bills and making appointments are all things that need to get done.

Why not start your to-do list on your commute?

Hint: Be careful what information you display on your screens when you're surrounded by strangers.

Read a book

Immerse yourself in a great novel and time will fly by.

If you find a particularly engaging book, you'll be able to escape into your own world, despite being surrounded by 1,000 fellow commuters.

Try reading the same book as a friend or co-worker, and chat about it when you get the chance. Turn your commute into a mini book club!

Hint: Don't read paperwork or documents from work, if you can help it. (And don't forget your first love: Metro newspapers!)

Do nothing

You can survive with no cell phone, no music — nothing. Some days the most productive thing to do is let your body catch up with life.

There are lots of different practices and exercises designed to help you get in touch with your own thoughts and feelings, and there's a good technique for everyone.

Hint: Is chilling out not really your cup of (green) tea? Try closing your eyes and concentrating on your breathing. Do nothing else. It's both more difficult and more relaxing than you might expect.

Work relationships.

Try this advice for making sure that huge ego doesn't overshadow you.

A narcissist's ability to make you feel good inside can draw you right into their world. Their magnetizing gaze can lock on you and make you feel good. But the author of "Freeing Yourself from the Narcissist in Your Life," Linda Martinez-Lewi, has offered ways to identify and deal with people with this fixed personality disorder in the workplace.

Take a step back

Although having the skills to identify a narcissist is important, it is imperative to be able to separate yourself from them at work in order to avoid being controlled.

Martinez-Lewi says that if people don't, "they become a victim of narcissistic abuse."

"[Narcissists] project their unconscious impulses, feelings, thoughts, fears and rage on to the victim," says Martinez-Lewi. "They can be vindictive, they can get very angry."

As a result, she adamantly calls on all victims to remember to make the mental and sometimes physical separation from the narcissist.

Play nice and keep your distance when dealing with a narcissist at work, says Linda Martinez-Lewi. / PROVIDED

Protect yourself

Martinez-Lewi recommends taking good care of yourself by getting enough rest, eating healthy and exercising. However, your psychological state of mind is just as important.

"You [must] remain as pens, you can point it out to them in a courteous way," says Martinez-Lewi. "You have to be very delicate. Don't confront them head-on, or they'll let you have it."

Kill 'em with kindness

"A narcissist can provide you with many opportunities, since their thinking is so grandiose," she says. "Use areas of your mind that you wouldn't have thought of otherwise." Martinez-Lewi says to compliment narcissists in a very authentic way, but be wary of getting too comfortable with them.

"Enjoy their good qualities," recommends Martinez-Lewi, "but always remember that they have a fixed personality disorder that is not going to change."

Is there a narcissist in your life?

Martinez-Lewi describes these people as "great method actors" because while they're deceitful and lack conscience, she adds: "They're playing a part. And in a way they kind of believe it."

Huge ego: "Many of them are very grandiose," says Martinez-Lewi. "They have this sense of themselves that's larger than life and better than anyone. They are perfect and superior."

Ruthless and cutthroat: Although narcissists do tend to have an outstanding brilliance, Martinez-Lewi explains that they are also unable to have any kind of emotional intimacy. "They will step over anybody to get what they want," says Martinez-Lewi.

Reform is needed

Republicans and Democrats in the Senate deserve praise for passing immigration reform with a pathway to citizenship for nearly 11 million Americans. The House should be next. I think this is unacceptable to the millions of immigrants who want citizenship. The path to citizenship already has the support of a majority of the House. My father came to this country as a 13-year-old orphan. Through hard work, he was able to earn enough money to become a permanent resident. I am the first woman in my family to go to college. Even with all of my education, gaining citizenship is still a complicated process.

Weekend's answer

Rodriguez homers, but Gardner bails out Yanks

MLB. Mariano Rivera surrendered another homer to Miguel Cabrera as he blew his third straight save.

In terms of baseball results, Alex Rodriguez had the most productive showing since his return. In the end, it still was almost not enough for the Yankees.

Miguel Cabrera continued his onslaught against Yankee pitching by hitting a home run — for his third straight game and second in three days off Mariano Rivera — in the ninth inning as Rivera blew a third straight save for the first time in his career.

However, Rodriguez's day ended with him catching Brett Gardner's helmet

Rodriguez was 2-for-4 with a home run and two RBIs. / GETTY IMAGES in the wild celebration after the center fielder's solo home run with two outs in the ninth gave the Yankees a 5-4 victory over the Tigers yesterday.

"It's a work in progress," Rodriguez said of his best day out of the five games he has played so far. "Hopefully it's a step in the right direction."

Cabrera's acquisition by the Tigers came in the same offseason Rodriguez opted out of his initial 10-year contract signed with Texas. The Yankees agreed to re-sign Rodriguez to a contract that will take him to 42 years old, a week after Cabrera was traded by the Marlins to the Tigers.

"His bat stays in the strike zone a long time and he's smart," Detroit manager Jim Leyland said of Cabrera. "He also knows when people are trying to pound him in: He opens up a little bit, pulls his hands in to hit it out to left. He's just a great hitter."

But when Gardner's home run landed in the second deck beyond right field, things were slightly better for everyone on the Yankees.

"That's the first time I've ever hit a walk-off home run," Gardner said. "It might be the last."

Movin' on up

Brooklyn's Betances called up

Dellin Betances began his transition to relief pitching last fall in the Arizona Fall League, and it translated to Triple-A Scranton/Wilkes-Barre this season as he was rewarded with a promotion to the Yankees yesterday.

It is the second time Betances has been promoted. He spent eight days with the team in May but did not appear.

In 33 games (six starts) with the Railriders, he was 6-4 with a 2.97 ERA.

"The more time I get on the mound, it's being more consistent," Betances said.

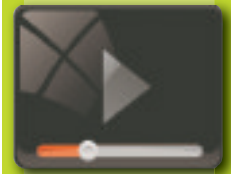

He was born in Washington Heights, but went to Grand Street Campus High School in Brooklyn.

Smith back at practice after ankle injury

Rookie quarterback Geno Smith was in action for the Jets' first practice since he injured his ankle in Friday's preseason debut.

He had a noticeable limp, but was not limited in any of the team's drills.

"Obviously the ankle isn't full strength right now, but I felt pretty good out there," Smith said. "I was limping a little bit. It's just something that you've got to work past, you've got to get through. I felt pretty good."

Smith saw his first NFL action Friday, but his time was limited due to the injury. He went 6-of-7 for 47 yards.

Dufner celebrates on the 18th green after winning the PGA Championship — his first major. / GETTY IMAGES

PGA Championship. Dufner takes final major of golf season

Jason Dufner was already an Internet sensation. Now he's a major champion as well.

Dufner shot a major-low 63 in his second round and managed to hold off veteran Jim Furyk on the final day, finishing two strokes ahead at 10-under.

Furyk, who led coming into the day, shot a 1-over 71 yesterday.

Swedes Henrik Stenson and Jonas Blixt finished third and fourth respectively.

Dufner developed something of a cult status on tour when he admitted to using chewing tobacco during rounds and a photo of him falling asleep during a charity event kicked off a meme called "Dufnering."

The 36-year-old veteran turned pro in 2000, but struggled to even stay on tour for much of his first decade. But he broke out in 2011 with a second place finish in the PGA Championship despite faltering down the stretch and won twice in 2012. He climbed to No. 21 in the world this season.

Tiger Woods and Phil Mickelson both struggled all tournament long. Woods shot an even-par 70 yesterday to finish 4-over, while Mickelson finished well back at 12-over. MARK OSBORNE
